2011 ANNUAL REPORT

For more than 30 years, Outreach International has provided sustainable solutions to help end extreme poverty around the world.

For its program and cost effectiveness, Outreach International has been awarded the Independent Charities Seal of Excellence – fewer than 0.2% of U.S. charities have earned this Seal. In addition, Outreach International is recognized as a Four Star Charity by Charity Navigator and is a Better Business Bureau accredited charity, meeting all 20 standards for accountability set by the BBB.

OUR

Since 1979, Outreach International has helped communities break through the devastating effects of poverty by addressing a multitude of issues, including child survival, literacy, universal education, clean water, food security, microenterprise, hunger and malnutrition. There is no quick fix for poverty. But there is a way you can create long-lasting change – by helping families and communities move toward self-reliance. That’s why every program you support is designed to build the capacity of the people involved. Because projects don’t end poverty; people do. You won’t hear us talking about recipients. The people we serve are our partners – men, women and children with stunning resilience and untapped intelligence and creativity. So while we may measure our impact with clean water wells, schools and clinics, our key investment is in people.

STORY

That’s how you’ll get the breakthrough. There’s where you’ll find Sustainable Good<sup>SM</sup>.

BREAK THROUGH

Projects don’t end poverty; people do. That’s why our key investment is in the people themselves – women, men and children with stunning resilience and untapped intelligence and creativity.

2011 IMPACT

One way to measure the impact of your gifts is by the number of people benefiting from development projects like clean drinking water, girls' education, childhood survival and food security. But the real measure of success is the transformation of a community from subsistence to self-reliance, even prosperity. Every project noted below represents an investment in people – in the dignity, worth and ability of the marginalized poor to bring about sustainable change for an end to poverty.

BREAK THROUGH

“What’s the most important thing I can do to break the cycle of poverty?”

We get that question a lot. And here’s our answer: Give people a voice. Invite them to be leaders, urge them to ask questions, and celebrate with them as they find and own the solutions.

TRANSFORMING

LIVES

What does it mean to invest in a partner community? It means meeting people as peers, standing with them in their struggle and not giving up until the job is done.

Here's a typical scenario. You and your neighbors feel powerless against poverty. From birth, you've been taught that there's no way out. That the best you can hope for is a string of handouts. Even that your plight is God's will.

Until one day, when a different kind of development worker visits your village...

1. This development worker invites everyone in the village – even the women and youth – to identify the greatest need. You and your neighbors decide on safe drinking water.

2. Your children used to spend hours each day walking for water. Now there is time for them to attend school. To aid the little ones, volunteers are trained to teach at a new village preschool.

3. Teachers see that hungry children have difficulty learning. But not every family can afford a mid-day meal, so a School Feeding Program is started. Attendance soars, and the well-nourished children fare better academically.

4. To support the School Feeding Program, the village organizes a community garden. Free organic fertilizer from your goats – another village success story – increases the harvest to help feed vulnerable children.

5. Greater harvests produce a surplus that can be sold at the market. But you need access. So the rugged path to town is improved, and a bridge is built. With your earnings from the market, you can afford to send your children to secondary school.

6. A nearby village learns about the transformation taking place in your community. They approach Outreach International for help, and the process starts all over again.

BREAK THROUGH

When you invest in a partner community, you're helping transform an entire village, and the lives of future generations. Remarkably, you can expect this kind of change within just 3 to 5 years... and it costs only about $15 per person each year. Here's a typical scenario.

JUDITH'S

If women hold up half the world, Judith is doing her share of the heavy lifting. Her commitment to the orphaned children of her village is nothing short of heroic.

This is her story.

I am visiting Chigwere, a breathtakingly beautiful village in Malawi, Africa, where Outreach International works. Judith has invited me to her home, and we are sitting together on a woven grass mat. She is surrounded by children.

“My name is Judith,” she tells me with the assistance of a translator, “and I am a widow.” She draws a breath and continues. “Although I do not have a husband, I have taken in six orphans from our village. I have two children, and I also take care of my younger sister, who suffered a stroke.”

Across the bridge of those few words comes a trainload of truth.

In Malawi, one of the world’s poorest countries, nearly everyone struggles to thrive. Growing or buying food is an endless concern, and disease is a constant threat. Nearly 60 children in Chigwere have recently been orphaned – half by HIV AIDS.

Taking care of one’s own is hard enough here, but to do it without a partner...and then to take on six more young children...

I ask the obvious question: “How do you do it?”

“It is very difficult. I cut grass and sell it, or I collect firewood to sell. But this is not enough.”

Judith tells me that when times are really lean, when there is no food in the house, she leaves the village to find piecework.

She may be gone a day or two, and the children are hungry. So she leaves them with a cob of corn and tells them to pluck the dry kernels and toast them over a fire. If they swallow the corn and then drink water, the starch will swell and trick the belly into feeling full.

STORY

STORY BY SUSAN MEDLER

Public Relations Manager for Outreach International

BREAK THROUGH

A quiet revolution is taking place in our partner communities. Women and mothers, silenced by generations of oppression, now stand alongside traditional tribal chiefs as respected project leaders. “We are very free now, and we are teaching our children that boys and girls shall work together.”

I wonder aloud what would have happened to the six orphaned children if she hadn't taken them in.

"They would have died," Judith says.

That was the painful truth before Outreach International began working in Chigwere. Sometimes children were discovered too late, already taken by starvation or dehydration. Now, the community has organized on behalf of the orphans.

"We walk the community regularly," says Judith. "If we find children alone at home, we ask, 'Where is your mother? Where is your father?'"

Today, all of Chigwere's orphans have a home. To assist Judith and the other adoptive parents, Outreach International helped the community launch several self-sustaining programs, including a poultry project, a children's health-monitoring program and a village preschool.

And guess who stepped forward to serve the school as a volunteer teacher? That's right: Judith. Outreach International connected Judith with a teacher-training program, and now she spends part of each day helping little ones learn their letters and numbers.

"We have no books or paper or chalk, but we can see a great improvement in the children. They are better prepared for primary school; they do better in school." Kids are healthier, too, thanks to the school's nutrition program.

Nearly 120 children attend the preschool; 39 of these are AIDS orphans. The school is free for the children, partly because teachers like Judith volunteer their time. It's time Judith might otherwise spend growing food or earning income by doing piecework.

"I just decided to help the children," she says. "I don't have much, but I want to share the little that I have."

I asked Judith what she hopes for most. I imagine the universe of possible answers.

Her answer is immediate and unequivocal: "Fertilizer." It's the practical answer of a dedicated mother with many mouths to feed. Fertilizer means more food.

In the background, one of Judith's daughters is adding a fresh layer of mud to their house – it needs to be at its strongest when the rains come next month. The youngest child scoots closer to Judith; she draws her knees in and closes her eyes for a nap. 🙈

BREAK THROUGH

Many international charities prefer to work in larger, easy-to-reach villages that already have some of the basics, like electricity and clean water. Outreach International is different – from the start, we've been committed to helping the poorest of the poor.
